Black's bid for release denied

COURT Conrad Black's bid for release pending a review of his fraud convictions was denied Thursday, but experts said it's unlikely the former media baron will be content to remain behind bars until the U.S. Supreme Court hears his appeal. Black has already served nearly 15 months of a 6½-year prison term following his convictions in July 2007 for fraud and obstruction of justice.

The obstruction charge is not part of the Supreme Court review, but the three fraud counts are being assessed and Black's lawyers had argued he was entitled to his freedom until a final decision was made.

Swine flu swells

WHO declares H1N1 as full pandemic, first since 1968

The little virus that came out of nowhere, influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu, has made it over the pandemic threshold, prompting the World Health Organization to declare Thursday that the globe is experiencing the first influenza pandemic since the Hong Kong flu of 1968.

The new H1N1 virus, which burst onto the world's radar a mere nine weeks ago, overtook what had long looked like the most likely culprit to "go pandemic" as flu watchers say, the H5N1 avian flu virus.

WHO Director General Dr. Margaret Chan announced the decision after going over available evidence about the new virus's behaviour and spread with the WHO's emergency committee, a group of experts that has served as a sounding board for Chan during this fast moving outbreak.

"We are satisfied that this virus is spreading to a number of countries and it is not stoppable," she declared at a news conference in Geneva.

Dr. Allison McGeer, a Toronto-based flu expert, suggested political and societal concerns have mired the WHO in a declaration process that has trailed behind the science.

"From a science perspective, anybody will tell you that this has been a pandemic for weeks," said McGeer, head of infection control at Mount Sinai Hospital where she's been dealing with seriously ill swine flu patients for some time.

"You can understand why the World Health Organization is having trouble, but it does put you in this really odd situation of having a zebra out there that you can't call a zebra."

Flu Outbreak

Canada, the third country to find cases and the third hardest hit to date, has confirmed 3,047 cases in all provinces and territories but Newfoundland and Labrador. Canada has recorded four deaths.

No cause for alarm, doc says

Ontario health officials moved swiftly Thursday to quell any worries about influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu, cases in the province as the World Health Organization raised the pandemic alert to its highest level.

The message from Ontario's top doctor was clear: Residents don't have cause for alarm since the status of the virus in the province hasn't changed and the vast majority of cases are considered mild.

"Don't panic because it's gone to level six because it's the same old situation," said Dr. David Williams, Ontario's acting chief medical officer of health.

His comments were echoed by the CEO of Ontario's Agency for Health Protection and Promotion.

"Nothing changes as of 11 o'clock in Ontario because the WHO moves to (level six)," said Dr. Vivek Goel.

Action

- The province isn't planning any immediate action in response, Dr. David Williams, above, said, and will only act if illnesses become more severe. At that point, the province's emergency operation centre would be activated, stockpiles of drugs would be deployed, and local flu centres would be opened, among other initiatives.

Man drives off in dump truck after pickup runs out of gas

A 65-year-old man took off in a dump truck after his pickup ran out of gas outside of Peterborough. The owner of the dump truck, which was parked in a construction site, called police who found the truck steps away at the Fraserville Esso where the man had stopped for a coffee. Sign of summer, and it's not roses

Drivers should be waking up Friday to one of the sure signs of summer — gas at a buck per litre. Liberal MP and consumer affairs critic Dan McTeague predicted the price of a litre of regular gas at the pumps would tick over to $1.03 Friday, up from Thursday's price of 99.8 cents per litre. However, at least one filling station in downtown Toronto had already jumped the gun and was selling gas at more than $1 per litre Thursday. METRO NEWS SERVICES

Miller backs residential daycares

Mayor David Miller sided with child-care advocates Thursday, expressing opposition to a proposal to restrict the opening of new day nurseries in residential areas.

Miller, rebuking city staff who drew up the plan, called the proposal "too restrictive." He suggested it would be eliminated by staff or the planning committee before it goes to a vote by city council.

"Families need daycare, and they need it in their neighbourhood and community."
Mayor David Miller

"Families need daycare, and they need it in their neighbourhood and community," he said after speaking at the EcoCAR competition at the Sheraton Centre. "As a parent, my kids were in daycare in our church just up the street for several years, then they were in daycare in our school just up the street. You need to find a way to allow daycares to be part of a neighbourhood."

The restriction, which would allow new day nurseries (those caring for more than five children) to open in private houses only after a rezoning process, was proposed as part of an effort to harmonize zoning bylaws in the pre-amalgamation municipalities that now comprise Toronto. Only the former City of Toronto allowed large home daycares to open without specific approval.

Such day nurseries have long represented only a small percentage of the city's child-care facilities. But advocates and some parents have argued new restrictions would only exacerbate a chronic shortage of daycare spaces.

Hundreds of new buses for province

PROGRAM Hundreds of old and polluting public transit buses will soon be kicked to the curb as the province rolls out a brand new fleet to serve commuters across Ontario.

Municipal transit systems in 47 communities will be putting a total of 470 new buses on the road. The fleet is being funded through the Ontario Bus Replacement Program, which received an injection of $50 million to replace aging vehicles.

It's hoped the funding will not only improve public transit service, but will also increase ridership and accessibility and improve air quality. Minister of Transportation Jim Bradley says the goal is to remove single-occupant cars from roads and fight climate change.

By fall, municipalities will have received more than $1.3 billion in gas tax funding to purchase buses.

Taya's Braids for AIDS

Grade 3 student publishes Munsch book for charity

A lot of publishers would happily surrender a hefty advance for the right to publish a new book by Robert Munsch. Taya Kendall, a Grade 3 pupil in Guelph, Ont., was granted that privilege for free.

Taya makes her debut in the book business Thursday with a self-published edition of Braids, a story by multi-million selling kids favourite Munsch. But the 8-year-old upstart is already demonstrating the acumen and no-nonsense temperament required in the publishing world.

In January, Taya met Munsch at a reading at the Guelph Public Library. The famed Canadian children's author was struck by the young girl's resemblance to a character in one of his unpublished stories, about a young girl who reluctantly allows her hair to be braided but is ultimately pleased with the result. Munsch granted Taya permission to use the story in the school newspaper she had launched earlier that month at Sir Isaac Brock Public School.

"I felt like the happiest person on earth," Taya recalls. "I thought, 'Oh my gosh! Oh my gosh!' It's a Robert Munsch story and he's so popular. Then I thought that a lot of Robert Munsch stories are books so this should be a book too."

The Taya Kendall edition of Braids features 28 illustrations by students from her school

Initially, the $10 book will be sold in 17 Ontario outlets, with all of the proceeds going to Children of Bukati, a program to enable AIDS orphans to attend school in Butula, Kenya.

Court takes bite out of pit bull legal attack

ANIMALS The Supreme Court of Canada said Thursday it will not hear a bid to quash Ontario's ban on pit bulls.

The attempt to take the fight to Canada's highest court was launched in April by a Toronto dog owner represented by lawyer Clayton Ruby.

"That's the end of the legal attack, but it remains a bad law, a terrible law." Lawyer Clayton Ruby

"That's the end of the legal attack, but it remains a bad law, a terrible law," Ruby said in an interview.

In his submission to the Supreme Court, Ruby argued there is no scientific or statistical basis to conclude that pit bulls are more dangerous than other dogs.

He asked the Supreme Court to review a decision from Ontario's Appeal Court last October that upholds the province's ban.

The high court decided Thursday that it would not hear the appeal.

The Ontario Appeal Court concluded that pit bulls are dangerous and unpredictable dogs that have the potential to attack without warning.

Relay for Life to light up night

CHARITY Whether they are currently fighting it, have overcome it, or have lost a loved one to it, thousands of Torontonians affected by cancer will gather at dusk Friday for the Canadian Cancer Society's Relay for Life.

Now in its eighth year, the annual event — being held at Forest Hill Memorial Park and Centennial Park Stadium — begins at dusk and pushes through until dawn.

Participants in teams of 10 will take turns running, walking or strolling around a track in an effort to raise funds for cancer.

After the event runners will light candles in bags with messages on them to light up the night.

This year's goal is to raise $153,900. By yesterday afternoon, pledges had already reached $140,000.

Former McGuinty aide was eHealth consultant: Papers

Woman earned over $10K for 32.5 hours

A former aide to Premier Dalton McGuinty was among the highly paid consultants who benefited from an untendered contract with eHealth Ontario, a provincial agency mired in a spending scandal, documents show.

Karli Farrow, a former adviser to McGuinty who works for the Courtyard Group, billed eHealth for 32.5 hours of consulting work in January — amounting to $10,646 at her $327 hourly rate.

According to billing records, her tasks included corresponding about eHealth "priorities" with Don Guy, the premier's former chief of staff who is now president and CEO of polling firm Pollara.

McGuinty, who has been dogged by questions about eHealth all week, wouldn't say whether he was aware of Farrow's work for the agency.

Sarah Kramer

"I really do think we should allow the internal audit to be completed now, as well as the provincial auditor," he said after speaking at an Ottawa hospital.

"There are all kinds of things that come up, and I think we ought to introduce a little more light and a little less heat."

EHealth, the second provincial agency tasked with creating electronic health records, has ignited a political firestorm for awarding nearly $5 million in untendered contracts.

Opposition parties have accused eHealth of giving Liberal-friendly firms lucrative contracts without taking competitive bids.

Sarah Kramer was abruptly removed as president and CEO earlier this week amid the furor over eHealth, which allowed consultants who were paid about $2,700 a day to bill taxpayers for minor purchases such as tea and snacks.

Blaming city negotiators for refusing to take more than 100 pages of concession requests off the table, Ferguson said management's current approach will not result in a deal before the 12:01 a.m. deadline on June 22.

Besides garbage workers, the union represents those who work in parks, animal services and water treatment plants.

Our Smile
has been turned upside down.

Last year, Ontario dental assistants were all smiles because they thought that dental assisting would soon become a regulated profession. Regulation would mean that only formally trained dental assistants could work in dental offices.

We recognize that the economic crisis has dashed the hopes of many Canadians, and that certain measures are necessary for survival. But we also consider the regulation of dental assisting to be a matter of public health. Dental assistants take x-rays and are responsible for infection control. Yet many are trained on the job in Ontario putting your safety at risk.

We believe that regulation will happen for Ontario dental assistants one day. Until then, to protect your family, ask if ODAA-certified dental assistants are working in your dentist's office. At least, that's one good reason to smile.

Update on state of stimulus

PM says 80% of $22.7B has been rolled out across Canada

Prime Minister Stephen Harper delivered a rosy report Thursday on the progress of his government's stimulus spending as he attempted to stave off a summer election, saying 80 per cent of the money earmarked under the plan had been rolled out across the country.

The second of his government's quarterly progress reports, which Harper delivered in southwestern Ontario's economically beleaguered manufacturing belt, was being closely watched by his political foes.

The Liberals have threatened to try to pull the plug on the minority government if the report did not show real progress in the rolling out of $22.7 billion in stimulus spending.

DAVE CHIDLEY/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Stephen Harper speaks Thursday about the federal government's progress in implementing Economic Action Plan Initiatives at a town-hall meeting in Cambridge.

"Fully 80 per cent of our plan's funding has been committed and is being implemented across this country," Harper said in Cambridge.

"Some 3,000 individual projects across the country are now getting underway."
Stephen Harper

"Some 3,000 individual projects across the country are now getting underway — no small feat only 72 days into a new fiscal year."

The government's economic plan, although costly, is putting Canada on the path to recovery, an upswing that would only be sidetracked by "needless political instability," Harper said in a shot aimed at the opposition.

Ignatieff said he could make a decision as early as Friday.

He said he will base his decision on the best interests of the Canadian people.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper said 80 per cent of stimulus money has already been distributed, but Ignatieff slammed the federal government for failing to dish out stimulus dollars.

HEALTH The breast cancer tests of 65 patients in Newfoundland were overlooked in a review of tests done from 1997 to 2005 that was intended to verify their accuracy, health officials in the province said Thursday.

SUICIDE An Alberta judge said schools need to teach students the signs their friends could be considering suicide. The recommendation was made after an inquiry into the hanging death of a 15-year-old girl on the Siksika Nation, east of Calgary. The judge said if schools were to participate in World Suicide Prevention Day, it might help.

Chalk River reactors may be fix for global isotope crisis: Expert

The Canadian government made the wrong decision when it abandoned two nuclear reactors that could have produced medical isotopes, leading to a critical shortage of the material worldwide, says the head of a major isotope supplier.

Stephen DeFalco, chief executive of Toronto-based life-sciences company MDS Inc., said "the world is waiting for Canada to take action" on the medical isotope shortage, and the solution is the Maple reactors in Chalk River, Ont.

"Both Maple 1 and Maple 2 and the processing facility are 100 per cent completely constructed and the Maples do work, they have created isotopes," DeFalco said Thursday. "We believe the government's decision to abandon the Maples was not a reasonable public policy for Canada or for the world. It was the wrong decision."

The world is facing a critical shortage of medical isotopes — used to diagnose and treat cardiac and neurological conditions and several types of cancer — after government-owned Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. shut down the reactor May 15 due to a heavy-water leak.

Officials estimate it will be at least three months before the reactor — which produces about a third of the world's medical isotopes — is up and running again.

Need for Maple

- A U.S. report found that the Maple reactors are the only clear solution to the shortage, since any new reactors would take 10 to 12 years to get up and running.

Jean on power of journalism

An excerpt from a speech given by Gov. Gen. Michaëlle Jean as she presented the Canadian Journalism Foundation Lifetime Achievement Award to former CBC TV journalist Joe Schlesinger Tuesday night at the Canadian Journalism Foundation Awards Gala in Toronto:

Gov. Gen. Michaëlle Jean: "Journalism plays a vital role in asserting the civic responsibility of a community, a country and the world."

The journalist I was and the Governor General I am know that journalism plays a vital role in asserting the civic responsibility of a community, a country and the world.

I know because I grew up in a country where journalists who dared to challenge censorship and tyranny were assassinated.

I know because when I was a journalist, I kept in mind and at heart the example set by those journalists who pursued the truth, often risking their lives to do so.

I know because during the state and official visits I have made as Governor General of Canada to Africa, Afghanistan, South America and Europe, and during my trips all across this country, I have seen that the pens, microphones and cameras wielded by journalists can also act as instruments of social transformation.

Faced with a world that always seems to be in crisis, robbed of its dignity, stripped of its beauty, divided in its fragility, warming at its poles, and assaulted by the fluctuations of its economies, we must also be given the power to reflect, raise our awareness and seek clarification.

I think that that is the most important — and noble — aspect of your profession."

Commission asks for less power to issue fines over hate speech

INTERNET The Canadian Human Rights Commission says it still has a role to play in fighting hatred on the Internet, but wants Parliament to curb its powers.

It says it should no longer be able to levy fines of up to $10,000 against hatemongers and wants lawmakers to provide a clear, legal definition of what constitutes prohibited hatred.

The commission also wants changes that would allow it to award costs in cases where accusers abuse the process and to quickly dismiss complaints that don't meet the definition of hate.

But the commission insists the Internet remains a potentially dangerous realm where hatred can spread insidiously. The tribunal says it has to stick around to help rein in such hatred and help strike a balance between free expression and the right of people to live free from discrimination.

Killer denied day trips

Mother of 5-year-old victim breaks down at hearing

Janet Morrissette was overcome with emotion Thursday as the man who strangled and then slit the throat of her five-year-old daughter in Calgary 17 years ago was denied escorted day trips from a prison in New Brunswick.

Surrounded by family members, Morrissette sobbed and said "thank-you" as the decision was read.

Gleason Bennett Williams had his application for temporary release denied by the National Parole Board at a hearing at the medium-security Dorchester Penitentiary near Moncton where he is held.

Williams was 36 when he strangled Shannon Dawn Morrissette, who was hearing-impaired and couldn't speak, in his basement suite in southeast Calgary. The killing occurred across an alley from the girl's home and he later threw her body into a nearby dumpster.

Shannon, who communicated by sign language, was playing at the back of her house and in the alley on Aug. 15, 1992.

Rebecca Lynn Morrissette, left, looks on as her aunt Claudette Kennedy holds a portrait of her sister Shannon Morrissette outside Dorchester Penitentiary, in Dorchester, N.B. on Thursday after attending the application for temporary release from prison for Gleason Bennett Williams.

She visited Williams's basement suite twice that day. The first time she left after he gave her an orange and apple.

When Shannon returned later, Williams strangled her and slashed her throat twice with a knife. Her body was found by police in a duffle bag the next morning in the dumpster.

Lab tests were unable to conclude whether the girl had been sexually assaulted. Williams denied any sexual contact with Shannon.

The former construction worker received a life term with no chance of parole for at least 20 years after pleading guilty in a Calgary court in 1993 to second-degree murder.

Buy America: Blatant protectionism

InBusiness

Cats, it appears, can be herded if the stakes are high enough. Our provincial premiers, in an extraordinary display of unanimity, now say they support the Harper government's desire to enshrine state/provincial and local procurement practices under the North American Free Trade Agreement.

By expanding NAFTA this way, Canada would gain an exemption from the Obama administration's Buy America rules.

Buy America instructs state and local governments to purchase only U.S.-made steel or manufactured goods under procurement contracts funded by Washington's $800-billion US economic stimulus package. Exemptions are already held by several countries — Australia, Britain and Mexico among them. They, unlike Canada, had the foresight to negotiate free trade in subnational procurement contracts with the U.S.

Buy America is blatant protectionism, the kind of appealing, but self-defeating economic strategy governments use in recessions when it's politically necessary to appear to protect domestic jobs. It's also the kind of measure that provokes reprisals. Why just the other day, the Federation of Canadian Municipalities voted to exclude U.S. companies from their procurements. The vote was non-binding, but typical of the pushback that accompanies trade disputes.

Ottawa has a good case for an exemption. The Canadian and U.S. economies are highly integrated. A part made in Canada might go into a U.S.-built component, which is then assembled into a finished Canadian product for shipment back to the U.S. Think of it as a supra-national supply chain.

By one estimate, about 70 per cent of Canada/U.S. trade is this sort of industrial back and forth, which means that penalizing one side automatically disadvantages the other. Canadian officials like to remind Americans that more than seven million U.S. jobs in some 35 states, including the vote-heavy industrialized northeast, depend on trade with Canada. Equally, U.S. companies could lose something like $15 billion a year in business if Canadian municipalities cut them off from procurement contracts.

Canadian officials would like Congress to write an exemption clause into the Buy America legislation or have U.S. President Barack Obama issue an executive order doing the same. Both are remote possibilities, meaning the likeliest course is re-opening NAFTA.

This has its own hazards. In addition to swapping an exemption for access to Canadian procurement business, the U.S. might have other items on its shopping list. A new NAFTA will take time, and may not take effect until U.S. stimulus funds are long gone.

It's great Canada is finally on the case, but we should have taken care of this business long ago.

Social workers, not cops, should be in schools

UrbanCompass

I was at the Toronto District School Board this week trying to convince some trustees to abandon the experiment of putting police officers in schools and was impressed once again about how dysfunctional the school board is.

The trustees might be good people, but as a group they seem ineffective and out of touch. They are paid so little ($5,000 per year) that if they want to feed and clothe their families they haven't much time to perform all their TDSB duties.

Yet the problem is deeper than that. The board is like the old Metro Toronto Housing Authority, which ran public housing. The public housing was owned by the province, and the province set all the rules about spending and management. But the province didn't want to appear responsible since public housing always seemed to be a mess, so it appointed an authority.

The authority had no real powers, no authority to do anything on its own.

The TDSB is in the same position. The province sets spending limits and policy. The trustees don't have the power or authority to do very much. They can't run the system, but the public expects them to. It would be better if the province ran the schools directly — which would be such a disaster that we'd see clearly why schools should be under local control.

Back to police in schools. It costs about $100,000 to put a cop in a school for a year, and with 20 schools, that's $2 million. The data seems to show no difference in criminal activity in schools with cops and those without, so I argued the experiment has not been a success. If we want to give kids better choices, hire social workers, not more police.

I don't know what the trustees decided. I suspect they decided to drift and not have a firm policy on police in schools.

Pirates charged in Kenyan court

Kenya charged 17 Somali men with piracy Thursday, a day after the U.S. Navy handed them over to authorities in the East African nation. Kenya is holding more than 100 piracy suspects from neighbouring Somalia, a country in tatters and with no functioning government or legal system after two decades of anarchy. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gadhafi knocks U.S. in speech

SPEECH Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi urged the world Thursday to understand what motivates terrorists, and likened the 1986 U.S. strikes on Libya to Osama bin Laden's terror attacks. Gadhafi, who was long accused of sponsoring terrorism, struck a provocative tone as he addressed lawmakers on a trip to Italy. The speech got tepid applause and was likely to add to the controversy that has surrounded this rare visit to a Western democracy. "It is not very intelligent to chase terrorists down the Afghan mountains," Gadhafi said in the hour-long speech. "That's impossible. We must look at their reasons." Gadhafi said he condemned terrorism, al-Qaida and bin Laden.

CIA believes bin Laden still alive

The CIA believes Osama bin Laden is still in Pakistan, and the spy agency is hoping to close in on him as that country's military cracks down on the northwestern tribal area where he is thought to be hiding.

CIA director Leon Panetta told reporters after a speech on Capitol Hill Thursday that finding bin Laden remains one of the CIA's top priorities. "I guess one of our hopes is that as Pakistani military moves in, combined with our operations, we may have a better chance to get at him," Panetta said.

He said the Pakistani offensive in the Swat Valley is making very good progress compared to Pakistan's past efforts to crack down on extremists. The Pakistan military says it has killed more than 1,300 militants during the offensive and reclaimed most of the region.

"We may have a better chance to get at him."
CIA director Leon Panetta on bin Laden

Past offensives against Islamist militants often faltered, with the government choosing to strike peace agreements with the extremists. A peace deal in Swat collapsed in April after the Taliban advanced just 60 miles from the capital, Islamabad.

Panetta also hinted the Obama administration is crafting a new approach to confront both North Korea's and Iran's nuclear program. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Afghan violence worsening: U.S. general

WAR Violence in Afghanistan hit an all-time high in the last week, the United States' top war zone commander said Thursday.

Gen. David Petraeus said the number of attacks in Afghanistan over the last week hit "the highest level" since the December 2001 fall of the Taliban. He did not provide hard numbers.

"Some of this will go up because we are going to go after their sanctuaries and safe havens as we must," Petraeus, head of U.S. Central Command, said in a speech.

Extremist attacks tend to increase in the summer months, and in part are spurred by military efforts to crack down on insurgents, Petraeus said. In Belgium, after meeting Thursday with European defence ministers, U.S. Defence Secretary Robert Gates said NATO allies agree with the U.S. that progress must be shown in Afghanistan over the next year to 18 months. TORONTO Building a great city – together

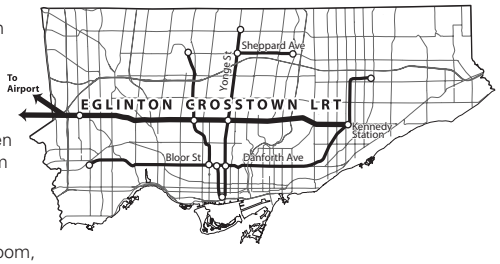
The City of Toronto holds public consultations as one way to engage residents in the life of their city. Toronto thrives on your great ideas and actions. We invite you to get involved.

Eglinton Crosstown Light Rail Transit (LRT)

Preliminary Planning
NOTICE OF OPEN HOUSE

Public Consultation
We are holding six Open Houses where you can learn more about this transit project, ask questions, and share your comments. All Open Houses will be held from 6:30 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Details are as follows:



June 15: William Lea Room, 1073 Millwood Rd

June 17: Eglinton Public School, 223 Eglinton Avenue East

June 18: Richview Collegiate, 1738 Islington Avenue

June 23: York Memorial Collegiate, 2690 Eglinton Avenue West (at Keele Street)

June 24: Beth Sholom Synagogue, 1445 Eglinton Avenue West (at Allen Road)

June 25: Don Montgomery Community Recreation Centre (formerly Mid Scarb. CC), 2467 Eglinton Ave East

Background
The Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) and the City of Toronto are conducting preliminary planning for a new Light Rail Transit (LRT) route along Eglinton Avenue from Kennedy Subway Station to Pearson International Airport. The LRT would link to the Yonge Subway at Eglinton Station and the Spadina Subway at Eglinton West Station. As part of the Transit City light rail network, important connections will be provided to the proposed Don Mills LRT and Jane Street LRT.

The Eglinton Crosstown would provide modern, accessible and comfortable light rail transit service. Within the central section between Brentcliffe Road (just west of Leslie Street) to Keele Street, the LRT would operate underground as the width of Eglinton Avenue in this area is too narrow to accommodate LRT. For the remainder of the route, the LRT would operate in surface transit lanes in the centre of the street.

Five Open Houses were held for this project on August 14, 19, 25, 27 and September 4, 2008. Responses to questions and comments submitted will be posted in the Frequently Asked Questions and Answers section on the project website toronto.ca/transitcity

At the June 2009 Open Houses, TTC and the City will present proposed station and station entrance locations for the central underground section (Brentcliffe to Keele). For the rest of Eglinton Avenue, proposed platform locations and traffic management strategies to provide fast and reliable LRT service will be displayed. Alternative corridors for the extension from Martin Grove Road to Pearson International Airport will also be exhibited.

The preliminary planning for the Eglinton Crosstown LRT will lead to a Transit Project Assessment under the Environmental Assessment Act.

Download crackdown

France to restrict abusers' access despite rights law

The French government will move ahead with a new Internet law even though a key aspect contravenes the 1789 Declaration of the Rights of Man, the culture minister said Thursday.

Christine Albanel told Europe-1 radio that people illegally downloading material over the Internet would start receiving warnings later this year.

President Nicolas Sarkozy had pressed for the newly voted law to attack the growing problem of illegal downloads. It would cut Internet access for those who don't heed a series of warnings.

However, a key aspect of the hotly debated measure was struck down Wednesday by the constitutional Council, which ruled that only a judge can order the cutting of anyone's Internet access, and that another authority doing so would breach both freedom of expression and presumption of innocence.

Albanel said the law must return to parliament for a fix, but that portions of the law not changed would be applied, including graduated warnings that precede any cutoff of access. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York to cull Canada geese after air crash

WILDLIFE New York City plans to kill as many as 2,000 Canada geese this summer in an attempt to avoid the type of collision that caused an airliner to ditch in the Hudson River.

The hunt will take place on dozens of city properties within eight kilometres of Kennedy and LaGuardia airports.

Aviation officials have culled bird flocks on airport property for years, but this will mark a major expansion of the effort into other parts of the city.

Shooter faces murder charge

An 88-year-old white supremacist was charged with murder Thursday, a day after officials said he left a signed anti-Semitic screed in his car, then gunned down a U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum security guard who let him in.

Security guard Stephen T. Johns was shot to death Wednesday by Holocaust denier James von Brunn, who had left his car in a lane of traffic outside an entrance to the museum before walking in with a concealed rifle, police Chief Cathy Lanier said at a news conference. Von Brunn exchanged fire with guards who shot and critically injured him.

In his car, officers found a notebook with a handwritten note saying, "You want my weapons — this is how you'll get them. The Holocaust is a lie. Obama was created by Jews," according to a court affidavit.

A self-described artist, advertising man and author living in Annapolis, Md., von Brunn wrote an anti-Semitic treatise, Kill the Best Gentiles, decried "the browning of America" and claimed to expose a Jewish conspiracy "to destroy the White gene-pool."

Von Brunn was charged with murder and killing in the course of possessing a firearm at a federal facility, both capital offences under federal law.

Who is James von Brunn?

- James von Brunn, left, is a Second World War veteran who served in the U.S. Navy.
- In 2004 and 2005 he lived briefly in Hayden, Idaho, for years home to the Aryan Nations, a racist group run by neo-Nazi Richard Butler.

U.S., Canadian businessmen oppose Buy America caveat

THREAT Canadian and American business officials are joining forces to warn of the growing threat to prosperity in both countries due to the so-called Buy America provisions in U.S. President Barack Obama's economic stimulus package.

Jayson Myers, president of the Canadian Manufacturers and Exporters organization, joined two senior officials at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to outline the impact of Buy America. They want Obama to provide clearer guidelines to states and municipalities on the provision, which dictates that steel and manufactured goods bought with stimulus funds must be made in the United States.

Business leaders say a caveat to the bill, requiring that international trade obligations be obeyed, has had little impact at the state and municipal level.

Group calls for Sri Lankan inquiry

The Sri Lankan government never seriously investigated reports of human rights abuses during 25 years of civil war and needs to overhaul its justice system to bring peace to the country, Amnesty International said Thursday.

The rights group said the problem is even more urgent in the wake of the government's defeat of the Tamil Tiger rebels last month in a bloody offensive that the United Nations says left more than 7,000 civilians dead.

Human rights groups and diplomats accused the government of shelling heavily populated civilian areas and said the rebels held thousands of civilians as human shields, shooting those who tried to flee. Both sides denied the accusations.

UN estimate of civilians killed during Sri Lanka's offensive.

"If communities that have been torn apart by decades of violence and impunity are to be reconciled, the Sri Lankan government should initiate internal reforms and seek international assistance to prevent ongoing violations and ensure real accountability for past abuses," said Sam Zarifi, Amnesty International's Asia-Pacific director.

In a report, the group called for the establishment of an international commission to investigate those allegations because past government probes into abuses have gone nowhere.

Mass kidnapping in Yemen

MEDICS Yemeni tribesmen kidnapped 24 local and foreign medics working at a Saudi hospital in northern Yemen on Thursday and demanded the government release two of their colleagues.

Armed tribesmen kidnapped the group, which includes male and female medics from Egypt, India, Sudan and the Philippines, as they were travelling in a bus from the capital, San'a, to northern Sada province, said Sheik Hezam, who identified himself as one of the kidnappers. The tribesmen commandeered the bus and took it to a mountainous area in Amran province, 80 kilometres north of San'a, Hezam said.

Lululemon's growth slows

Lululemon Athletica said first-quarter profit was down 24 per cent compared to the same time last year but up six per cent from the fourth quarter after it launched an online shopping site, cut prices on some items and slowed expansion plans.

The Vancouver-based yoga-inspired retailer also reported a six per cent hike in revenues in the first quarter — which beat the consensus analyst estimates — and said it expects sales to improve further in the second quarter.

Net income for the quarter was $6.5 million US, down 23.5 per cent from $8.5 million a year earlier.

Lululemon chief executive Christine Day said the company expects to open between five to seven stores in 2009, which is down significantly from the previous goal of opening 35 stores annually. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bolt strikes again

World's fastest man wins at Festival of Excellence

Usain Bolt won the men's 100 at the inaugural Festival of Excellence on Thursday night.

The 100-metre world record holder of Jamaica and triple gold Olympic gold medallist ran 10.00 seconds under dark skies and a steady downpour at Varsity Stadium.

Shawn Crawford of the U.S. was second in 10.25, while Ivory Williams, also of the U.S., finished third in 10.28.

Earlier Priscilla Lopes-Schliep of Whitby, Ont., won the women's 100-metre hurdles in 12:86 while fellow Canadian Perdita Felicien of Pickering, Ont., was second in 12:88.

Organizers hope the Festival of Excellence breathes new life into track and field in Toronto, which hasn't seen a world class track event since Donovan Bailey battled Michael Johnson in the 150 metres in 1997, an event that turned into a bust when Johnson pulled up with an injury.

The meet featured 50 Olympians, but Bolt was the headliner, reportedly earning upwards of $250,000 for his appearance in the event held in the revamped 6,500-seat Varsity Stadium. Ticket prices ranged from $25 up to $250 for finish line seats.

Toronto marked the first major 100 metres this season for Bolt, who broke the world record in the seldom-contested 150 metres recently on a temporary track in Manchester, England. THE CANADIAN PRESS

MLSE committed to grass at BMO

SOCCER Toronto FC's home turf could become a real grass playing field by 2010 or 2011, according to the team's parent company Maple Leaf Sports and Entertainment Ltd.

"We want to put grass in BMO Field, we are committed to it happening," MLSE's executive vice-president and chief operating officer Tom Anselmi said Thursday at BMO Field during a mid-season briefing on the state of the team.

"We are prepared to write a cheque for it. It's not just as simple as snapping your fingers and making it happen. Grass at BMO Field permanently versus grass for Real Madrid are two completely different things."

A temporary grass field is being installed over BMO Field's artificial turf at a cost of about $250,000 for an Aug. 7 exhibition game between TFC and Spanish giants Real Madrid.

TORONTO FC Tony La Russa is not the only one having trouble with Twitter these days. Toronto FC's director of soccer operations Mo Johnston had an account started in his name Thursday. After the account tweeted "Who is Ali Gerba anyways?" and "I must admit I do like grass" Toronto FC confirmed the account was not being used by the real Mo Johnston.

A winning formula

Chemistry key to a team's success, Jays catcher Barajas says

DAVID SINGH
for Metro Toronto

If you follow a winning baseball club over the course of a season, you'll eventually hear the word chemistry mentioned in relation to how the team's players get along.

The word has certainly been thrown around in Toronto this year whenever broadcasters or writers have discussed the Blue Jays and their early success to begin the season.

But what exactly does chemistry mean? It can be quite a vague term that's not always explained in sports talk.

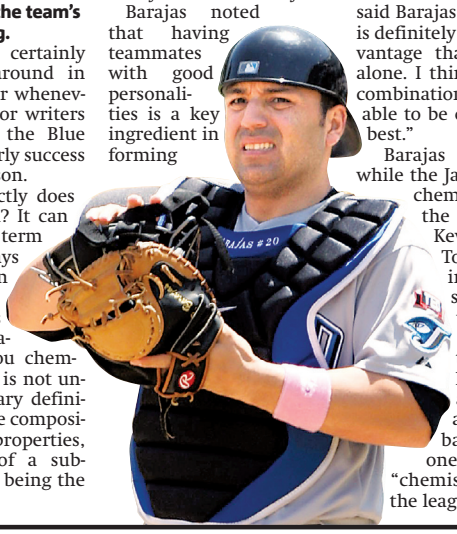
If you ask Jays catcher Rod Barajas, he'll tell you chemistry in baseball is not unlike the dictionary definition, which is the composition, structure, properties, and reactions of a substance (this case being the team).

"Chemistry is friendship," Barajas said. "Guys getting along and enjoying each other's company. And guys who like coming to the field. For me, that's the biggest part of chemistry. It's having people that you like around you."

Barajas noted that having teammates with good personalities is a key ingredient in forming chemistry. And in the catcher's view, it's tough for teams to win without solid chemistry.

"In the long run, you're going to have teams that don't have quite as good talent as other teams, but have better chemistry," said Barajas. "For me, that is definitely more of an advantage than just talent alone. I think you need a combination of both to be able to be considered the best."

Barajas believes that while the Jays had "great" chemistry last year, the addition of Kevin Millar, who Toronto signed in the off-season, has done wonders in the clubhouse this year. Millar has earned a reputation around baseball for being one of the better "chemistry-guys" in the league.



Leadership

- Veteran presence can often translate into chemistry for a team. "I think you definitely need some older guys that steer the team in the right direction," Rod Barajas said. The current Blue Jays roster includes eight players who entered the season with at least 10 years of big league experience: Barajas, Raul Chavez, Roy Halladay, John McDonald, Kevin Millar, Scott Rolen, B.J. Ryan and Vernon Wells.

"It doesn't matter who you are or what mood you're in, he can go up to you and make you laugh," Barajas said of Millar. "He brings that fun atmosphere. Everybody likes him and he gets along with everybody. He talks to everybody — young guys, old guys, Latin guys — it doesn't matter. He just brings everybody together."

Man United accepts record bid for Ronaldo

SOCCER Manchester United accepted a world-record transfer offer for Cristiano Ronaldo from Real Madrid yesterday, clearing the World Player of the Year to negotiate personal terms with the Spanish club.

The Premier League champions received an unconditional offer of 80 million pounds ($145.2 million Cdn) for Ronaldo, and unlike in the last off-season, manager Sir Alex Ferguson, told the Glazer family, which owns the club, that he is willing to see his 24-year-old star performer join a major European rival.

"At Cristiano's request — who has again expressed his desire to leave — and after discussion with the player's representatives, United have agreed to give Real Madrid permission to talk to the player," Manchester United said.

"Matters are expected to be concluded by June 30."

Madrid confirmed the offer for Ronaldo in a statement, saying: "The club hopes to reach an agreement with the player in the coming days."

A lack of respect

NHL should reward its most loyal fans with 7th team

The slow death of the Phoenix Coyotes in an Arizona courtroom is painful to watch, but it is highly instructive. It's a bit like a wounded dog begging for mercy from a too-proud master.

What is astounding is not that the NHL is trying to protect its ability to place franchises. Nor is it surprising that the league flinches when a maverick tries to lure a weak member of the herd to greener pastures.

No, what really makes you scratch your head is that in tough economic times, the bosses of pro hockey are deaf to the fans' voices.

The bottom line in any sport is that loyal and devoted followers are needed in order to flourish. There has to be a fervent commitment to the cause. In hockey's case, the disciples live in Canada. This is where the game is bred in the bone and where people crave the chance to see an NHL game in real life. In Ontario's Golden Horseshoe, there are millions of these obsessed fans.

In the southern United States, pro hockey is at best an amusement with a handful of curious onlookers. At worst, the NHL in places like Phoenix is an experiment conducted by mad scientists who think they can sustain ice in the heat of the desert.

It's unnatural — at times cruel — to the fans of a beloved game.

The NHL did not fight this hard to keep the Jets in Winnipeg. There were few bleeding hearts in the boardrooms when the Quebec Nordiques were allowed to escape to Colorado, thus robbing hockey of its most compelling rivalries.

"It's time to put the Coyotes out of their misery and end the dog days of hockey for good."

What is a good fan to think?

All of this pain and angst and a trumped-up court case in order to breathe life into a barely limping bunch of Coyotes.

Maybe the NHL should do what's fair and what makes good business sense. Perhaps the league might agree that its future is north of the border in Canada where the fans run wild.

It's time to put the Coyotes out of their misery and end the dog days of hockey for good.

Reynolds pantless, and loving it, in Proposal

Movie feature

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

With the amount of attention Ryan Reynolds is getting for his much-talked about nude scene in The Proposal, you'd think the Canadian actor would be getting annoyed with all the questions.

"No, I'm happy to talk about it," admitted Reynolds during a stop in Toronto to discuss his latest movie (in theatres next Friday). "It's definitely something that when people see the film, they take away and talk about it over and over again so I'm happy to bring it up."

For those uneducated about the film's said sequence, lets just say it involves Reynolds and co-star Sandra Bullock literally running headlong into each other fully undressed. As Reynolds says, "It's not a quick little flash or anything like that — you have to be perfectly comfortable taking your pants off around 40 or 50 crew members."

Lucky for Reynolds, his nine year acquaintanceship with Bullock may have eased the awkwardness just as it aided in establishing chemistry between the stars.

After all, in The Proposal, Reynolds plays overworked assistant to Bullock's bothersome book editor — that is, until her Canadian visa expires and she forces him to marry her in order to avoid being deported.

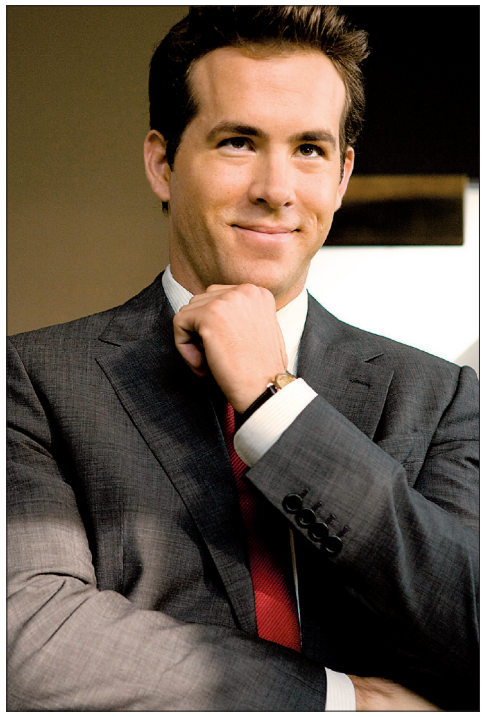
If that sounds like a pushy premise for a romantic-comedy, it may be because it shouldn't be regarded as such.

"When we were making this, we didn't really feel like we were making a romantic-comedy," said Reynolds. "It's more of a comedy to us. We were just going for laughs first and the romance was just kind of in there."

With the focus centred on laughs, making the movie became a surprisingly relaxed affair and the frivolity seems evident on-screen. For Reynolds — who has previously criticized that the two greatest moments in filmmaking are when you first get a job and the moment you finish a movie — The Proposal may have even altered his outlook.

"A movie like this kind of changed my whole perspective on what filmmaking to be just because it was so much fun to shoot and typically that doesn't translate onto the screen," said Reynolds. "In this movie, it did in spades and I think it's kind of forced me to re-frame that idea a little bit."

Whether that means more movies with a pantless Ryan Reynolds — only time will tell.



Ryan Reynolds is not shy about dishing on his much-talked about nude scene with Sandra Bullock in The Proposal.

Taking of Pelham 1 2 3 remake feels frozen in time

The Taking of Pelham 1 2 3

Director: Tony Scott
Stars: Denzel Washington, John Travolta
Classification: 14A
Rating: ●●●

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

REVIEW The Taking of Pelham 1 2 3, an update on the 1974 Walter Matthau/Robert Shaw subway heist caper, is really just an excuse for director Tony Scott to try out his jittery camerawork and seizure-inducing editing on the New York City subway system.

At one point, a character remarks on how beautiful the city is. We have to take his word for it, since the camera never slows down long enough for us to make it out.

Luckily, Scott brought along his favourite leading actor, Denzel Washington (this is their fourth collaboration), whose performance as a schlub of an MTA dispatcher in over his head dealing with a murderous hijacker (John Travolta). Washington does a lot without much to work with, disappearing into a character painfully testing the limits of his abilities. The bad news for Washington is who he's sparring with: Travolta's radicalized white-collar criminal, subtly named Ryder.

Travolta has played some great over-the-top villains in the past. Unfortunately, his agro shtick here hews closer to Battlefield Earth than Face/Off. Maybe it's the hastily drawn neck tattoos or the oddly vitriolic dislike of Italian-Americans, but he nearly devours the entire hijacked subway car with his scenery-chewing.

John Travolta plays a murderous hijacker in The Taking of Pelham 1 2 3.

Surrounding Washington and Travolta's extended dialogue are some pretty ridiculous plot points, including a video-chat-happy girlfriend picking the worst possible time to harangue her hostage boyfriend via his Wi-Fi-enabled laptop hidden on the subway car floor.

And when the ransom delivery car's mad dash through Manhattan comes to a crashing halt, James Gandolfini's mayor wonders aloud why no one thought to use a helicopter. The problem is, it's a valid question, and the filmmakers don't excuse themselves by simply having the mayor raise it.

Other details irk, like financial reporters freaking out over the pre-credit-crunch Dow dropping all the way down to 12,000. Add in the assaulting use of Jay-Z's 99 Problems over the opening credits and this remake feels frozen in time which is odd for a modernization.

Imagine saved by its heart

Eddie Murphy returns to daddy mode in Imagine That.

Imagine That

Director: Karey Kirkpatrick
Stars: Eddie Murphy, Yara Shahidi
Classification: G
Rating: ★★½

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Just when you thought Eddie Murphy's appeal as a dim-witted daddy had long expired, here comes Imagine That — a film that manages to capitalize on either a slight improvement on the actor's overbearing skill-set or a lowered expectation from moviegoers. Maybe a bit of both.

In the film, Murphy plays Evan, a divorced dad who dedicates most of his time advising wealthy financial clients.

So, just as the workaholic is about to be compete for a promotion, it proves prosperous that he discovers the inseparable, prophetic blanket his neglected daughter (Yara Shahidi) owns.

As he begins to share playful rituals with young Olivia to awaken the blanket's hidden prognosticating imaginary characters, Evan earns his daughter's affection.

That is, until selfishness complicates the relationship and he faces a valuable lesson about balancing work and family.

As transparent as that sugary storyline may be, Imagine That is undeniably huge on heart and a sharper-than-expected script captures an earnestness without it feeling like a ten-pound bag of beets being dumped over your head.

Imagine That may be one of Murphy's better forays into the family genre but one has to wonder if he's getting as tired of making cutesy G-rated fluff as audiences must be seeing him star in it.

The horror, the horror

Shock and Awe presents best of B-movie thrills

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

Gone are the days of the grindhouse, those urban-centric celluloid spitting fleapits where miscreants of every persuasion gathered to watch films that gleefully defied both the mainstream and good taste, offering more daring and depraved viewers the sweetest of big screen, B-movie shocks.

That art of exhibiting these sorts of sleazy counterculture gems is still championed by a select few, among them is Toronto film collector Dion Conflict. Together with the folks behind Toronto's legendary Fox Theatre in the Beach, Conflict is presenting the third instalment of his popular Shock and Awe all night film festival.

Starting at 11:30 p.m. Saturday night and running ceaselessly until 10 a.m. Sunday morning, Shock and Awe contains a mind blowing array of vintage sexploitation, exploitation and horror cult favorites, screened in all their 16 and 35mm projected glory, including such mouth-watering fare as the '70s softcore gem Mona and the classic '80s shocker Return of the Living Dead.

An image from Dead/Alive, an early Peter Jackson film.

But as Conflict reveals, the films themselves aren't Shock and Awe's only draw.

"When I came up with the idea I though it would be like a party." says the unabashed weird movie buff.

"This is not only a film screening. It's an event, with prize giveaways and an in-theatre marketplace. People think they can get everything on DVD or just download it but some of this stuff is not available at all. In fact, some of these prints are the last ones in existence."

In the best tradition of the grindhouse, Shock and Awe's prints (whose titles also include the early Jack Nicholson biker flick Hells Angels on Wheels) are suitably battered, having seen the spin of hundreds of projectors over the years. But in the context of these kinds of films, the splicier they are, the more hairs stuck to the frame, the more trippy and otherworldly they are.

"I have no shame when it comes to the presentation." Says Conflict.

Basically, if it has sprockets I'm going to run it. It's all part of the experience."

Moments captures life's beauty, terror

Everlasting Moments
Director: Jan Troell
Rating:

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Like his groundbreaking, trendsetting contemporary Ingmar Bergman, Jan Troell's personal body of work has defined much of the Swedish cinema ideal. But as strong and visceral as his classic pictures like The New Land and Flight of the Eagle are, his latest film Everlasting Moments may just be his late career masterpiece.

The film charts the troubled existence of forever put upon housewife Maria who suffers greatly in her marriage to the alcoholic, barbaric and philandering Sigge and finds her release in photography, taking pictures of the rapidly changing, darkly beautiful world around her, the "everlasting moments" of her life.

And while most Hollywood product would moralize the complex relationship between Maria and Sigge, simplifying it and casting easy judgements, Troell's picture isn't so base.

Instead it offers a dynamic, sympathetic and troubling portrait of class struggle, humanizing the monstrous Sigge as seen as simply a product of his dismal upbringing and stilted existence.

In the movie's most startling sequence, Maria takes her children to the cinema to swoon over the latest Charlie Chaplin film.

When they return home, the smitten family giddily bounces around the house impersonating the master comedian until their fleeting happiness is shattered by the appearance of a drunk, violent Sigge.

Life in all its beauty and terror are deftly explored in this slow, gorgeously shot and moving film. It's a must see.

Writer making film debut with Victoria Day

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

David Bezmozgis already has a successful career as a documentary filmmaker and a fiction writer, but his dream has always been to direct a feature film.

"I went to film school with the intention that I would direct," Bezmozgis told Metro. "But it's tough to get a film produced, so I never knew if it would really happen."

After launching a literary career with his wildly successful debut (Natasha And Other Stories, which earned a variety of accolades — including The Toronto Book Award — when it was released in 2004), Bezmozgis was finally able to secure the financing for his feature film debut Victoria Day.

The film is about Ben Spektor, a typical Toronto teen from the '80s who is obsessed with hockey and classic '60s rock. The story opens with Ben lending money to a friend to buy drugs at a concert, only to see that friend disappear afterwards. We then follow Ben through the difficult week that ensues and see him come of age amongst his family and friends.

Filmmaker David Bezmozgis, right, on the set of Victoria Day.

For Bezmozgis, the reason for exploring this material was to create a realistic portrayal of the adolescent experience.

Movie feature

"For the most part, movies made about teenagers are pretty simplistic and borderline stupid. I wanted to do something about this period of life that felt authentic," said Bezmozgis. "I think there's room in storytelling and in filmmaking to tell stories about teenagers that feel real and express the exuberance and awkwardness of teenage life."

Shot entirely on location and featuring a collection of actors cast for their look and ability rather than their recognizable names, Victoria Day continues Bezmozgis interest in telling stories routed in the simple reality of daily life.

"I just think there's so much about life that's fascinating to me," he said. "To try and render artistically on the page or on the screen those things about life that are baffling or amusing, that to me is always the challenge."

Having finally made a fictional film, Bezmozgis has no plans to abandon documentaries or the printed word.

"It's just a question of story. Each story is best told in a particular medium or a certain genre. I just want to go where my stories take me."

• Victoria Day opens in theatres next Friday.

FEATURE As a longtime stuntwoman and co-ordinator with nearly two hundred credits to her name, Alison Reid knows something about keeping a cool head while on set.

But she admits that she was still flustered when one of the stars of her feature debut The Baby Formula — a mock-documentary about a lesbian couple in Toronto who resort to unconventional means in order to start a family — had to stop filming a pivotal sequence because her water broke.

"Initially, Angela Vindt's character Athena was supposed to have her water break in the middle of the Pride parade — the idea was that somebody would put her on the back of a Harley and whisk her away to the hospital, which we thought would be funny," she said.

"We were rehearsing that scene and then Angela's water broke in real life. It was an unbelievable coincidence. She had to go to the hospital, of course, and so we shot the Pride sequence without her."

Such are the perils of filming a film in sync with a performer's real-life pregnancy. Or rather, two performers' real-life pregnancies: Reid says that she was inspired to make The Baby Formula — opening next week— only after finding out that Vindt and co-star Megan Fahlenbock (who plays Athena's partner Lilith) had both been knocked up.

"The number one question we get during Q & As is whether Angela and Megan are actually a couple," says Reid. "People are like 'they're really pregnant, so are they also really lesbians?' In fact, we just won an award for best feature-length documentary in Monaco, and my producer had to email them and say 'thank you very much, but this is a work of fiction.'"

Someone please stop Eddie Murphy

InFocus

Richard Crouse

metronews.ca/infocus

Eddie Murphy infuriates me. It hasn't always been that way. Twenty years ago his movies put a broad grin on my face. I loved his silly giggle in Beverly Hills Cop, his version of Greatest Love of All in Coming to America, and the "My mother was like Clint Eastwood with a shoe..." routine from Delirious is one of the funniest monologues ever, but that was when Eddie and I were both much younger.

Now an Eddie Murphy movie is as welcome as a case of gingivitis. That makes me angry. He may be the biggest, most talented star in Hollywood who consistently makes the worst movies. Don't get me wrong, nobody hits a home run every time, but Murphy's recent batting average is worse than most.

He's never been consistent, but in the old days for every stinker like Vampire in Brooklyn he'd make two others that were drop dead funny. Of late though, he's been stuck in Vampire in Brooklyn mode, trying to suck laughs out of increasingly thin scripts.

Eddie Muphy's cinematic nadir in Norbit may have cost him an Oscar for Dreamgirls, columnist Richard Crouse says.

Let's look at the good, the bad and the ugly on Murphy's filmography.

THE GOOD: In Dreamgirls Murphy gives the kind of performance that he's only hinted at in other films. As R&B singer James (Thunder) Early — imagine 1966-era James Brown — he blows the doors off, digging deep and creating a memorable character who is as magnetic as he is repulsive.

THE BAD: Haunted Mansion. It's a comedy! No! It's a mystery! Nope, it's a love story, a ghostly tale and an adventure story. It's all of those things and less. Mostly it's a big screen ad for a Disney theme park ride.

THE UGLY: With so many to choose from — Meet Dave, The Adventures of Pluto Nash, for example — it's hard to decide but I'll pick Norbit because it's the movie that cost Eddie his Oscar. He was nominated for Dreamgirls but had the misfortune to have Norbit open in theatres the week Academy voters were casting their ballots. Any goodwill he accumulated with Dreamgirls evaporated when Oscar tastemakers got a load of him dressed as an aggressive 300 pound woman and the award went elsewhere.

The worst part is, I think he knows the movies stink. He recently told Extra "I have close to fifty movies and it's like, why am I in the movies? I've done that part now."

Why indeed Eddie, why indeed.

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrchaos33@hotmail.com.

French music revolution

Catchy new album helps pop-rock band Phoenix get noticed

CAM LINDSAY
for Metro Canada

Success has a funny way of finding artists.

Back in the late '90s it seemed achievable almost overnight for Parisian acts like Daft Punk and Air, who carved separate niches into pop's ample market.

Phoenix was also there in the suburb of Versailles, and though the band had a unique sound — catalogue it somewhere between the Strokes, Steely Dan and the Art of Noise — the band never received any framed platinum discs.

"At the beginning it was really hard," admits frontman Thomas Mars. "I don't think we were even giving people a chance to like us because (United, the band's 2000 debut album) sounded more like commercial suicide to me. I remember being in France and everyone was confused, even by the record cover."

They shouldn't really blame themselves. The Frenchmen have crafted some of the most sophisticated, hummable pop music of the last decade and never changed their creative process while doing so. Mars sees each record "as a photo album that represents you at a certain time. I think we just want to make different records all the time. We don't really see any record as an upgrade."

He may see it that way, but there is an unmistakable vibrancy and progression with the fourth Phoenix album, Wolfgang Amadeus Phoenix. The rhythms are savvier, the melodies prompter and the arrangements are as flawlessly constructed as Frank Gehry's AGO. And it's gotten noticed — now people are finally catching on.

"To me it's more extreme, it's also a little more futuristic," says Mars of the new album. "All of the inspirations were so different that we couldn't find a way to put them together, so it is a record that was maybe a little more painful to make. But in the end it was more satisfying because it was more like a Frankenstein. (Because of it) I think the songs of United have a chance again."

As witnessed by an appearance on Saturday Night Live back in April, Phoenix have also progressed as a live band, something Mars feels is a result of making Wolfgang Amadeus.

"It can be a struggle after an album to play it live, because sometimes we've done things that are impossible to translate," he confesses. "For the first time I think we've managed to incorporate us as a rock band and bring the studio live, which is something that took us a long time to do."

- Phoenix plays the Phoenix Concert Theatre Monday, June 15, with opening act Amazing Baby.

Metro recommends

- Wolfgang Amadeus Phoenix, Phoenix: Dynamic indie dance-pop that fuses Strokes-like guitars, nimble keyboards and laidback vocals into a feel-good sound.

- Big Whiskey And The GrooGrux King, Dave Matthews Band: DMB sounds more celebratory, adding horn sections, raucous guitars and funky rhythms to the mix.

- Blackout! 2, Method Man & Redman: Humourous rap duo shows its flow can suit serious rhymes with old-school production and boom-bap beats.

Five fresh sounds

Alexisonfire, Grizzly Bear among top new music

SoundCheck

If Alexisonfire's new album doesn't debut at No. 1 on the Canadian album charts, demand a recount.

For many parts of Canada, spring has been a bust: long cool stretches punctuated by rain or even snow — in June! No wonder everyone is grumpy. Maybe what we need are some summer songs.

Alexisonfire: St. Catharines, Ont., noiseniks have evolved their sound away from the more screamo approach that found them fans on their first couple of records. They're still extremely heavy, but melody plays more of a role. I've heard most of Old Crows/Young Cardinals already — it's out on June 23 — and if it doesn't debut at No. 1 on the Canadian album charts, demand a recount.

Grizzly Bear: In six months, their Veckatimest album will no doubt appear on many a hipster "best-of" list. Chief songwriting bruin, Edward Droste — there is a member named Christopher Bear, by the way — grew up appreciating the more experimental sides of Brian Wilson. There's a lot of mutual appreciation going on with Radiohead, too. No wonder Thom and Co. had them open for parts of their 2008 tour. Think Elliott Smith or a less loopy Flaming Lips. Nice for those reflective moments around the campfire.

The Sounds: Perky Swedish pop-rock fronted by the extremely blond Maja Ivarsson. Since they formed in 1999, many a North American rock star (I'm looking at you, Dave Grohl!) have shown their love by sporting Sounds T-shirts. Their third album, Crossing the Rubicon, came out last week with the single No One Sleeps When I'm Awake conjuring early '80s New Wave memories of Missing Persons and even Blondie.

Spinnerette: Brody Dalle (or, as Queen of the Stone Age fans know her, Mrs. Josh Homme) finally has her post-Distillers project off the ground. We had a taste with the Ghetto Love EP just before Christmas which indicated that Brody was headed down a path similar to late-model Yeah Yeah Yeahs — which, is to say, a very good path indeed. Little known fact: Brody is a keen student of JFK conspiracy theories.

White Rabbits: Didn't bands with two drummers go out of fashion with the Doobie Brothers? Someone evidently forgot to tell this Brooklyn-based six-piece, who have just released It's Frightening, their second full album. The lead-off track, the aptly titled Percussion Gun, could lead to demerit points on your licence. Old school alt-rockers will be reminded of both Adam and the Ants and Bow Wow Wow.

The future has come

Juan MacLean crafts 'electronic dance punk' on new disc

KEITH CARMAN
for Metro Canada

"This is the most terrifying album to make," admits John MacLean — a.k.a. The Juan MacLean — about his sophomore effort The Future Will Come (DFA Records).

"The first one is easy. It's been lingering around for years. With the second, you're really put on the spot; told to make an album. People more often than not disappoint their fans' expectations."

MacLean's fears are unwarranted. Released in mid-April, the 10-track affair received instant praise for its unique amalgamation of indie rock's natural warmth and dance's infectious, upbeat rhythms.

Referring to his creation as "electronic dance-punk," MacLean spearheads a rare faction of musicians uniting dichotomous musical genres by embracing their core elements: A live band and digital programming, respectively. The Future Will Come is one of the first dance albums recorded with an entire cast of musicians. Yet how does a post-punk guitarist noted for his history with '90s indie rockers Six Finger Satellite translate into dance music innovator? MacLean blames ennui.

The Juan MacLean's latest album, The Future Will Come, received instant praise for its unique amalgamation of indie rock's natural warmth and dance's infectious, upbeat rhythms.

"I (became) disenchanted with indie rock by the late-'90s," he grumbles. "It'd become uniform, collegiate and uninteresting. It lost all of its appeal so I thought it was better to quit and get out while I still felt good about it rather than linger on and become mediocre; do something disingenuous that I wasn't happy with. I left music altogether until (friends) got me my first primitive setup — a computer, sampler and recording device."

Pulling from his rock history and embracing an inherent appreciation for electronics, The Juan MacLean was born, issuing debut effort Less Than Human in 2005. Tapping into his recording experience, MacLean injected authentic instruments into crafted beats, a then-revolutionary technique that is still unattainable to most today. Because of Less Than Human's mysterious appeal, it — and thereby The Future Will Come — took off exponentially, the mousey MacLean fast becoming world-renowned to dancers and shoe gazers alike.

"In the dance world, people don't make records that way," MacLean reasons. "They aren't making live-sounding records so we go in with this attitude of playing dance music live, adding live drums, bass, keyboard playing and percussion. We bring that expertise in the recording aspect. It's emulated but difficult to achieve."

MacLean projects that dance-punk bonds divergent sides of the musical spectrum because it brings together dance's bouncy fun but offers the natural resonance of tangible instruments. He also notes that with indie rockers, The Future Will Come has been welcomed far faster than Less Than Human.

"This whole indie/dance crossover, the use of live instrumentation and vocals made it palatable for indie fans. It's easier for them to understand and accept. It's easy to forget that even in the early 2000's, there was big divide. Dance fans went to clubs to hear DJs; didn't have much to do with live rock music.

"Conversely, indie rockers didn't want anything to do with club music, culture or dancing. At a typical indie rock show, you'd see people with their arms folded. The best show they've ever seen and they're standing there. I do it a lot of the time myself though. I don't blame anybody."

Doherty arrested

U.K. British police have arrested singer Pete Doherty on suspicion of drunk driving and drug possession.

Gloucestershire Constabulary says a 30-year-old man was arrested after officers spotted a car driving erratically in Gloucester, about 160 kilometres west of London, early Thursday. A police official confirmed the man was Doherty, who played a concert in Gloucester on Wednesday.

Letterman apologizes ... sort of David Letterman deftly played it both ways on Wednesday's Late Show as he apologized for wisecracks aimed earlier in the week at Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin and one of her teenage daughters — even as he milked the situation for more laughs.

"Of course, we make mistakes left and right," the CBS host said as he began a lengthy discourse that blended flashes of contrition with moments of hilarity as he took more pokes at Palin and her family.

Letterman had made several jokes on Monday's monologue about the Palin family's visit to New York.

His Top Ten list featured Highlights of Sarah Palin's Trip, and included: "Bought makeup at Bloomingdale's to update her 'slutty flight attendant' look."

But the diciest joke centred on the family attending a Yankees baseball game.

Letterman said "an awkward moment" occurred for Palin when, "her daughter was knocked up by (Yankee third baseman) Alex Rodriguez."

Without naming her, the joke seemed to refer to Palin's 18-year-old daughter Bristol, an unwed mother. But it was 14-year-old daughter Willow, not Bristol, who had been at the game.

Todd Palin issued a statement that said "any 'jokes' about raping my 14-year-old are despicable."

And Sarah Palin charged Letterman with "sexually perverted comments made by a 62-year-old male celebrity."

Letterman denied the joke was meant to be about Willow Palin.

"I would never, never make jokes about raping ... a 14-year-old girl," he said, dropping his signature sarcasm. "I don't think it's funny."

He also invited Palin to be a guest on his show. But the offer, extended to both Palin and her husband ("or leave Todd at home," Letterman suggested), was turned down on Thursday.

Going Out

This Story achieves greatness

For weeks now, the buzz surrounding the previews of West Side Story at the Stratford Festival has echoed one of the show's memorable tunes: "Something's coming, something good."

It finally opened last week, but the word on the street was wrong. It isn't good. It's absolutely great.

In fact, let's go in for a little critical bridge-burning here and declare that this West Side Story the best production of a musical in Stratford's long and distinguished list of triumphs.

What makes one show so special? A variety of things.

First is the show itself. From Arthur Laurents' brilliant transformation of Romeo and Juliet into a story about rival New York street gangs, to Leonard Bernstein's still-dynamic score to the tough/tender lyrics of a very young Stephen Sondheim, this is writing of the highest quality. And it's been put on the Stratford stage by an absolute dream team of a creative staff.

Those lucky enough to travel to the Chicago Shakespeare Theatre have been singing the praises of director Gary Griffin for years. Now the citizens of Ontario can see what makes his work so special: Clarity of vision, depth of emotion and style of execution.

One of Toronto's favourite sons, Sergio Trujillo, provides choreography that honours the full intent of Jerome Robbins' original iconic staging but fills the thrust stage of the Festival Theatre with all kinds of angular interest.

Musical director Rick Fox keeps the driving edge the score needs but isn't afraid to let his orchestra soar to romantic heights when the occasion warrants.

Doug Paraschuk's set has all the darkness and impending doom of Gotham City in the Batman movies but is capable of changing into a place where happiness can enjoy a few fleeting moments. And Kevin Fraser, the lord of lighting, once again knows how to turn illumination into art, while Jess Goldstein's costumes are colourful enough to please the eye without hijacking the rest of the senses.

West Side Story proves even better than all the buzz.

But what rockets all this technical skill into the stratosphere is the cast, which contains not a single performance worth changing and a bunch you will likely remember forever.

The evening is well and truly won the instant that Chilina Kennedy swirls onto the stage, with the radiant smile of someone who believes life has a lot of good in store, but the doe-like eyes of a girl who also knows that hurt and pain are possible parts of the equation.

Kennedy's singing is crystalline splendour; her dancing is gossamer elegance, and her acting of a complexity and power that will frequently leave you gasping.

Paul Nolan is the perfect partner for her. He's a Tony of ringing voice, great gymnastic aptitude (watch him leap onto that improbably high balcony) and rock-solid integrity. He's not just a handsome tenor singing pretty songs; he's a guy from the mean streets who's grasping at love as his one way out.

Jennifer Rias, besides being the sexiest Anita in memory, also knows how to get the most drama out of her scenes, as do the show's sacrificial victims: Andrew Cao's quick-to-riot Bernardo and Brandon Espinoza's amazingly textured Riff, who lets us see just enough of the feelings for Tony he dare not admit.

You don't try to understand perfection. You just bow low in gratitude and rush to see it. I doubt you could find a better show in the province of Ontario this year.

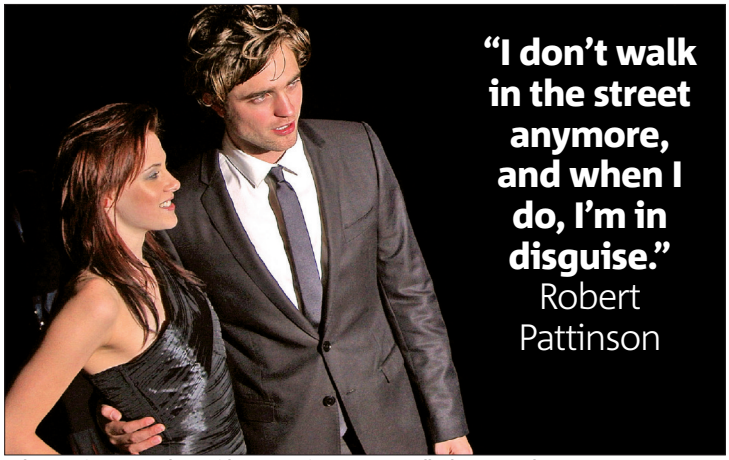
New star rising in New Moon

Robert Pattinson dishes to Metro about his new-found fame

TALIA SOGHOMONIAN
Metro World News

Robert Pattinson melted the hearts of many when Edward Cullen first appeared on screen in Twilight. The young actor is back in New Moon, but still admits he is shocked with the phenomenon Twilight has turned into. Pattinson sat down with Metro to talk about New Moon, his own success, and his character.



GETTY IMAGES

Robert Pattinson, seen here with co-star Kristen Stewart, talked to Metro about New Moon.

Q How is the filming going?

A It's great. To be honest, I am surprised at how relaxed it is. I was really nervous before we started because there's so much expectation now. But with this team, everything seems to work really well. Everyone knows each other. It's one of the most relaxed jobs I've ever worked on. It's really strange. It's going really well so far.

Q Last time we spoke, you told me that you still walked in the street without anyone recognizing you. I'm assuming that's changed now.

A I don't walk in the street anymore, and when I do, I'm in disguise. (laughs) It's actually a relief being back at work.

Q Were you surprised that Twilight became such a phenomenon?

A It never ever fails to shock me. Even here. Yesterday, there were 300 people outside the set. It's just crazy. Every day, every single person I meet knows someone who has a very strong attachment to the books. It's very difficult to put your head around. I can go through customs at any airport in the world — every customs agent is like, 'Can I get an autograph for my daughter?' Every single time! It's crazy! I just hope it doesn't change the way I think and stuff.

Q Which is your favorite motion picture vampire of all time?

A I always liked the original Nosferatu. I watched 30 Days of Night recently. I thought it was really good. But I wouldn't say that I was a vampire fan.

Q You must be offered a lot of roles now. How are you making your choices?

A I judge things purely on the script. I'm booked up for this year. I've been doing the most different things you can possibly imagine. Every part is so different. I can't say any of the parts I'm doing — they haven't been finalized yet. But I don't pick them in terms of genre; purely the script. If I like the script and I like the part, then that's all that matters.

Q Are there differences in your preparation to play Edward?

A I feel very familiar with the character. I'm a ghost, a figment of Bella's imagination. I'm not really playing Edward. I'm playing a kind of disrupted memory, which is really strange. I'm trying to play him as if Edward's constantly thinking that things are going to fall apart. It's this idyllic relationship on the top. I'm very, very close to the surface. He's so insecure about everything.

Photographer Mark Siddall and his models shed insecurities

HANNAH ZITNER
for Metro Canada

Breaking away from his past as the quiet gay kid in Port Colborne who became agoraphobic, Mark Siddall presents himself as a chatty, confident photographer who has no qualms asking models to take of their clothes for his latest exhibit, Men.

One of Mark Siddall's photographs in his latest exhibit Men.

"These guys should make a lot of people happy," he says of the 35 images of men with Atlas-like bodies he's chosen from a collection of thousands. "There's a few that should make people giggle, there's a few that might make some people go, 'Oh my god' and not want to see anymore."

Siddall, 46, taught himself photography during the 10 years he was dealing with agoraphobia. After acknowledging he didn't want to spend the rest of his life sneaking around alleyways hiding from people, he forced himself to spend time outside and eventually borrowed a friend's old Pentax film camera.

"And that's when I really fell in love with photography… It wasn't my intent to label myself as a photographer, that's just what I do right now.

But I'm still no Ansel Adams," he adds, referring to the celebrated American photographer known for his black and white photos.

The transition from shooting inanimate things — like flowers and buildings — to naked men was fluid for Siddall who takes pride in how comfortable he makes his subjects feel in front of the lens (so comfortable, one model regularly fell asleep while posing).

"Flowers like to pose for me. Flowers to humans was just a migration. I like to zoom in on different areas of the flower. So it's like shooting people as flowers: Get in there and shoot a part of them that speaks."

And for Siddall, those parts include hands, feet, face and genitalia.

Besides the tightly cropped images of men's parts, the collection also includes full body shots of strong, masculine men posed in playful, vulnerable positions.

"I find a lot of European people think it's nothing to wander around with a shirt off or in a Speedo, but in our society, we're so afraid to be naked. I'm just trying to ease it up."

Although Siddall wants people to see that being naked is very natural, he admits he has in own insecurities when it comes to revealing all.

"We are who we are. We cover up for a reason. We cover up for insecurities. We cover up because society wants us to."

"We cover up for insecurities. We cover up because society wants us to."

In brief

BOOK PRIZE American writer Michael Thomas won the 100,000 euro IMPAC Dublin Literary Award, one of the world's most lucrative literary prizes, Thursday for his debut novel Man Gone Down.
The book, which beat out 145 entries, follows an African-American man down on his luck, who has four days to keep his family afloat and reclaim his stake in the American Dream.

ANNIVERSARY Retired astronaut and second man on the moon Buzz Aldrin is celebrating the 40th anniversary of his moonwalk with an arts show. The celebrations will include a video montage that incorporates space footage and singalongs of songs such as Blue Moon, Moon River and Fly Me to the Moon. Aldrin also narrated a performance of Gustav Holst's The Planets on Thursday.

NEW EXHIBIT The Anne Frank House museum says it will put the teenage Holocaust victim's diaries and other writings on permanent display to commemorate what would have been her 80th birthday Friday. Until now, Frank's posthumously published diaries and other works have been kept in an archive in the Netherlands.

Metro's 7th Heaven: Metro taps what's hot right now

1 David Alvarez

ACTOR This Montreal-born 15-year-old shared the best actor award for the musical Billy Elliot at the prestigious Tony Awards Sunday night. Only a handful of Canadians have achieved this feat before but that's not the most remarkable thing about Alvarez. The teen had never acted, sung or tap danced until he started training for the Elliot role, which just took him six weeks to master.

2 Heavy Metal

TREND Is good old-fashioned hair-and-leather rock ready for a comeback? Consider these: Metal legends Iron Maiden recently released their live CD/DVD Flight 666. Mockmetal legends Spinal Tap are dancing with the devil once again with new album Back From The Dead. And Canadian metal underdogs Anvil announced that they will be opening for AC/DC at some North American venues. Yup, the beast is alive, heads will bang.

3 Bitte Orca: The Dirty Projectors

ALBUM If you checked the current playlists of Bjork, David Byrne and Vampire Weekend, this Brooklyn quintet would probably be on non-stop replay mode. Led by former Yale music student David Longstreth, the band's mix of punk, blues and art-rock zaniness have garnered them rave reviews in music mags.

4 The Sims 3

GAME Fake people are bringing in some real cash for gaming publisher Electronic Arts Inc. The latest instalment of the popular PC game sold 1.4 million copies in its first week, making it the bestselling PC game launch in EA's history.

5 Adam Lambert

CELEB Don't say you didn't hear the closet creaking. The mascara-laden American Idol runner-up has revealed to Rolling Stone that he's gay. Although he never denied his sexuality (photos of him kissing his ex-boyfriend appeared in March), this is the first time he has been forthcoming.

6 iPhone

GADGET Everyone's favourite little toy got a brand new feature: Lower prices. Now you will only shell out $99 (instead of $199) for Apple's 8GB iPhone, and that's not all. Apple also announced a new model of the iPhone — the 3GS — that will sport a faster processor and sought-after features like an internal compass and a video camera.

7 GM

AD The erstwhile sugar daddy of corporate America gets on its knees in this 60-second salvo to win back years of faith lost. GM's note of contrition and honesty sounds near incendiary, complemented by images of a runner with a prosthetic leg and a hockey player felled in the agony of defeat.

Foreign Journalists:
The sentencing of two American journalists — Laura Ling and Euna Lee — to 12 years in a North Korean labour camp helped place the spotlight on the dangers reporters face while trying to do their jobs. The committee to Protect Journalists announced in 2005 that murder was the leading cause of job-related death among journalists, and found the Philippines, Iraq, Columbia, Bangladesh and Russia to be among the most dangerous. Here are some suggestions to learn more about the dangers journalists face:

• ONLINE: Canadian Journalists for Free Expression (cjfe.org) is "committed to watching over regions of the world where journalists are assaulted, threatened, kidnapped and killed for reporting the news." The Committee to Protect Journalists (cpj.org) is an independent,nonprofit organization promoting press freedom worldwide by defending the rights of journalists to report the news without fear of reprisal.
• MOVIES: The films When the Sky Falls and Veronica Guerin — starring Cate Blanchett — both tell the story of the Irish crime reporter who was murdered while driving a few kilometers outside Dublin in 1996 by drug dealers. Another movie that deals with the dangers journalists face on the job is The Killing Fields (based on the experiences of three journalists in Cambodia during the Khmer Rouge regime).
• BOOKS: We Wish to Inform You That Tomorrow We Will Be Killed With Our Families: Stories from Rwanda, by The New Yorker writer Philip Gourevitch, chronicles the mass killings and strife during the Rwanda genocide. Bruce Chatwin's What Am I Doing Here includes a number of semi-fictional stories about his experiences as a writer — including a tense experience in Africa. The incident is also examined in Nicholas Shakespeare's biography of the Sunday Times journalist, Bruce Chatwin: A Biography.

MJ concerts hit courts?

A concert promoter has sued entertainer Michael Jackson for $40 million for allegedly breaching a contract to play a reunion concert with other family members.

In a lawsuit filed Wednesday in federal court in Manhattan, Allgood Entertainment claims it made a deal with Jackson's then-manager to produce a reunion concert with the Jackson family this summer.

The deal called for Jackson not to perform elsewhere before the event or for at least three months after it. The lawsuit says Jackson, manager Frank DiLeo and event promoter AEG broke the contract by signing to do a series of concerts in London this summer, which may also include a pay-per-view event.

According to the lawsuit, AEG knew of the agreement between AllGood, Dileo and Jackson, "but due to their dominance and power in the performance industry, coerced and/or induced Dileo and Jackson to disregard the agreements with AllGood and to work with it instead."

"We've given Michael Jackson and AEG every opportunity, publicly and privately, to resolve this matter and to date we have not heard from anyone,'' said Patrick Allocco, Allgood managing partner.

Jackson

Allocco said the last contact with either camp was May 22 in Beverly Hills.

Representatives for Jackson and AEG could not immediately be reached Wednesday.

Madonna adoption decision Friday

REPORT Malawi's highest court planned to announce Friday whether the pop singer Madonna can adopt a second child from the impoverished southern African country, the pop star's lawyer said Thursday.

The lawyer, Alan Chinula, said the ruling would be issued at 9 a.m. local time.

Madonna appealed after a lower court ruled she could not adopt Chifundo "Mercy" James because she had not been screened over time in Malawi. The lower court said the residency rules were bent when Madonna adopted her son David from Malawi last year.

During a hearing in May, the three judges of the Supreme Court of Appeal heard constitutional expert Modechai Msiska argue on Madonna's behalf that, although residence was a factor, it would be unconstitutional if adhering to the requirement negated a child's rights.

Johns Gulumba, a lawyer for Eye of the Child, an independent group that opposes the adoption, argued before the appeals court that following the rules kept the doors closed to potential child abusers, and foreign adoptions should be the last resort.

Madonna found the girl in 2006 at Kondanani Children's Village, an orphanage in Bvumbwe just south of the commercial capital of Blantyre. It was the same year Madonna began adoption proceedings for David, whom she found at another orphanage in the central Mchinji district.

Madonna has founded a charity, Raising Malawi, which helps feed, educate and provide medical care for some of Malawi's more than one million orphans, half of whom have lost parents to AIDS.

Carradine death no suicide: Expert

REPORT The independent forensics expert who examined David Carradine's body says the actor didn't commit suicide and Carradine's brothers are asking for understanding as Thai authorities investigate. Keith and Robert Carradine say they're grateful for the outpouring of support during what they call a "profoundly painful time." In a statement read Thursday in Los Angeles, they also thanked U.S. and Thai authorities for their work. The family also released a statement from Dr. Michael Baden, who said Carradine's death wasn't a suicide. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

City's five official tourism bloggers provide the down-low on their town

Think you know Montreal? Whether the answer is yes or no, five bloggers hired by Tourism Montreal are betting they can show you things to do that will let you live like the locals.

How about free food if you're a woman, or a pedicure where fish eat the dead skin off your feet?

"Because of the economic times, we're trying to promote cheap and cool things to do in the city," says Tamy Emma Pepin, who blogs about girls' getaways.

Pepin recommends a free table d'hote (dinner with a set menu) at Cafeteria Restaurant on trendy St-Laurent Boulevard, only for women on Monday nights. At Resto L'Appartement in Old Montreal, if a bottle of wine is purchased, two girlfriends can have table d'hote for free on Wednesdays, she adds.

RYAN REMIORZ/THE CANADIAN PRESS

"That's something tourists definitely won't know," suggests Pepin.

As for the fish pedicure, that's offered at Tami Beaute des Ongles on Duluth Street and Pepin says, "It tickles."

Other bloggers have different areas of expertise and write about the city's arts and culture, nightlife, gay and lesbian scene and Epicurean experiences.

They also reach potential tourists with videos they make, some of them on YouTube, and through Facebook pages and the microblogging site Twitter.

The five were hired because of their passion for all things Montreal and "what makes those things so 'a la Montreal'" says their promotional material. They all have journalism backgrounds.

Brendan Murphy blogs about Montreal's nightlife.

He connected with a Tennessee tourist through Facebook who wanted to know how the city's jazz scene has changed since his last visit about 15 years ago. "I don't know how me and that guy would have ever been in conversation before," Murphy said.

"That guy," Moses Freeman Jr., will travel with his wife and friends to Montreal in August as part of a cross-Canada trip. He said he's been reading Murphy's blog for several weeks.

Ontario outings

Run wine country

• This weekend, June 13 and 14, you're invited to be "a part of wine and sports history" by participating in the inaugural Twenty Valley Niagara Wine Country Run — which is fashioned after the famous Medoc Marathon held every year in Bordeaux.

• This unique run winds through Twenty Valley wine country showcasing Ontario's ineyards and premier wineries. It will finish in downtown Jordan, Ont. where all 3,000 runners and supporters are invited to celebrate at the Finish Area Street Party.

The first 1,500 registered runners will receive an inaugural participant gift, namely pair of souvenir wine glasses.

• Participating wineries include Henry of Pelham, Featherstone Estate Winery, Tawse Winery, EastDell Estates, Flat Rock Cellars, Mountain Road Wine Company, Calamus Estate Winery, Angels Gate Winery, Cave Spring — Niagara Peninsula, Malivoire Wine, Vineland Estates Winery, and Thirty Bench Wine Makers.

• Register at winecountryrun.com or call 905-949-1910 x 301.

Race day

• On June 20, discover and help protect the GTA's environmentally significant Oak Ridges Moraine by signing up for a 160-kilometre, 24-hour adventure relay.

• The non-stop team challenge will include biking, hiking or running and canoeing along the Oak Ridges Trail from Rice Lake to King City. Teams of up to 15 compete in elite, corporate and recreational categories. Moreover, teams can collect pledges that will help the Oak Ridges Trail Association keep the trail going.

• The association is also looking for volunteers for the event. For further details, visit moraineadventure.com, call 905-833-6600 or contact info@oakridgestrail.org.

Staycation deal

• Looking to stay in Canada for an affordable holiday this summer? GreatCanadianHotels.com is offering great rates and free nights at 25 hotels and resorts across the country with their Wake Up to Canada promotion. The promotion features the following offer: Stay for one night and receive $50 off your next stay or stay two nights or longer and receive a free night on your next stay.

• Vouchers provided are completely transferable and can be given to family and friends if your travels don't take you back to that city again. The nightly hotel rates start from $89.

• Summer hotel packages are available as well and feature accommodation along with unique outdoor experiences like whale watching and white water rafting, cultural experiences with jazz festivals and local food tours as well family fun theme parks and water parks.

• For more information, or to make reservations, visit the greatcanadianhotels.com or call 1-888-422-6232.

Snap a photo, help raise cash for Bruce Trail

ADVENTURE The Bruce Trail Conservancy and KEEN Canada are undertaking a second year of a very successful program that lets hikers raise money to conserve trails by taking and posting images of themselves while out hiking. Last year, Bruce Trail enthusiasts posted over 11,000 submissions, which meant KEEN Canada gave the conservancy $50,000 to help it secure more Escarpment land. This year, the program is called Boots Across Canada, and to participate, you just have to take a photo of your boots (or shoes) on any Ontario trail; then visit keencanada.ca and upload your photo. For every such picture taken on an Ontario trail, KEEN Canada will donate $5 to the Bruce Trail Conservancy.

"My adrenaline is somewhat flowing now because I go and read Brendan particularly and other links that he puts on his Facebook page," Freeman said via telephone from Chattanooga, Tenn.

Freeman is now in his 70s and describes himself as an "old avant-garde jazz enthusiast," a fan of the genre from the '40s, '50s and '60s.

"I will know exactly what jazz clubs to go to because of him," he said. "I am aware of the sites and therefore I can plan the exact night of what we're going to hear, who we're going to listen to and in what clubs."

So far, he said he plans to visit Montreal's House of Jazz, but hasn't yet decided on any other venues. He says the local jazz scene is a "hip crowd."

Daniel Baylis blogs about gay life in Montreal and says the first stop is the city's Gay Village, but he notes that Le Mystique is a downtown gay bar where the music isn't so loud that you can't talk.

"Whether you're in the village or whether your on the Plateau (neighbourhood) or in Old Montreal, you can walk around holding your honey's hand," he said. "It's going to feel safe."

Montreal also is well known for restaurants that allow tourists to bring their own wine.

Katerine Rollet says the Apollo, featuring Italian food, on St-Laurent Boulevard, and Khyber Pass, with its Afghan cuisine, are two restaurants where tourists can sip their own favourite reds or whites.

She recommends a visit to Marche Jean Talon for produce and, to "live like a local on a Saturday afternoon," a trip to Cafe Olympico for a cafe au lait in the city's Mile End neighbourhood is a must.

For arts and culture, Daviel Lazure Vieira recommends indie bookstore Drawn & Quarterly on Bernard Street and Le Comptoir D'ailleurs boutique and gallery on St-Laurent Boulevard.

Vieira says he doesn't like to compare cities: "We just want to let people know what our city has to offer that's different from other cities," he explains.

How many cars does it take for Beyoncé to cross the road?

LAZY In town on tour, Beyoncé Knowles took a 14-metre car ride from her London hotel to a shop, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The singer took two chauffeur-driven vehicles containing her team and bodyguards, trailed by paparazzi, on a car journey from the Mandarin Oriental Hotel — located in the exclusive Knightsbridge area — to the Harvey Nicholls department store located opposite.

Knowles reportedly demanded she be driven because she didn't want to walk in her high heels. After being escorted around the designer store for just 20 minutes, she took her car back to her hotel.

A source told Britain's Daily Star newspaper: "Beyoncé has always been down to earth but her antics were astonishing.

"It looked like they were preparing for a long journey, but it was over as soon as it began … It would have been much quicker to have strolled across the road."

Miss California stripped of crown

PUSHED OUT Learning she was stripped of her title, former Miss California USA Carrie Prejean says her opposition to gay marriage was responsible for her ouster, people.com reports.

"None of this would be happening right now if I just said, 'Yeah, gays should get married. You're right, Perez Hilton.'" Prejean, 22, told Access Hollywood's Billy Bush. After Bush informed Prejean live on his radio show that she'd been dethroned, she responded: "That's the first that I've heard of it, Billy."

During the pageant in April, judge Hilton asked Prejean her opinion of gay marriage. She replied that it is her belief marriage should be exclusively between a man and a woman — a response that sparked controversy, especially when her strong anti-gay-marriage activism was revealed, as were topless photos from her past and the news that she had undergone breast enhancements.

Still, last month Miss USA co-owner Donald Trump announced Prejean could keep her crown. That changed Wednesday. "To me she was the sweetest thing. Everyone else, she treated like s—," Trump told TMZ about Prejean.

The beauty queen wasn't making good on her royal duties, said officials. She was fired, Miss California USA executive director Keith Lewis said in a statement, "Based solely on contract violations including Ms. Prejean's unwillingness to make appearances on behalf of the Miss California USA Organization."

Disputing that claim, Prejean told Bush: "I've tried to reach out to them, and I've done several appearances and I'm going to be presenting at the Special Olympics this weekend as an honourary guest. I mean, I've been co-operating with them. I don't see why this is happening."

Shia's twisted childhood

A PSYCHIATRIST'S DREAM Shia LaBeouf credits his parents for his strange funny bone.

"My humour came from seeing my parents have sex, smoke weed, my mom being naked — just weird hippie stuff, twisted, R-rated humour," he told Parade magazine.

LaBeouf also takes a moment to have a go at the entire acting profession, saying, "It's a profession of bottom-feeders and heartbroken people. Most actors on most days don't think they're worthy. I have no idea where this insecurity comes from, but it's a God-sized hole."

Madonna and Jesus at odds

NOT ON THE SAME PAGE Madonna is to meet her 22-year-old boyfriend's parents, femalefirst.co.uk reports. The 50-year-old singer wants to take her relationship with model Jesus Luz to the next level and is planning to fly to Brazil to get to know his family.

A friend of the pop star told In Touch Weekly: "Madonna is getting serious, so that's why she wants to meet his family. She has been growing closer to Jesus every day. The big age difference doesn't mean a thing to her."

But Luz seems far less committed. In a recent interview on Brazilian TV, he said: "Madonna is a friend who has entered my life. I don't have plans of marrying her. I can't say if she is the girl of my life. She is a marvellous and nice person."

However, Luz's father Luis Heitor Pinto da Luz recently revealed the couple is considering getting married in a Kabbalah ceremony. He also confirmed the couple are living together in New York with Madonna's three children.

Rihanna ordered to testify

LEGALLY COMPELLED Rihanna has officially been subpoenaed to testify in the case against her ex-boyfriend, Chris Brown, who is accused of assaulting her.

"Rihanna was served at my office by L.A. DA investigators," her attorney, Donald Etra told People magazine. "If the preliminary hearing indeed goes forward, she is now legally required to be there, she will be there, and will answer all questions truthfully."

The hearing is set for June 22, when it will be decided if there is enough evidence against Brown to go to trial.

Paris and Doug call it quits

SHORT-LIVED Paris Hilton is back on the market after splitting with her boyfriend Doug Reinhardt, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The heiress had been dating The Hills star since Christmas and had publicly declared her love for him, calling him her "best friend" and "future husband."

A spokesperson for Hilton told people.com, "Yes, this is true they are no longer together.

The news comes a day after Hilton declared Reinhardt was "hotter" than Brad Pitt on Jimmy Kimmel Live.

Metro Recipe of the Day

Italian Meatballs in Tomato Sauce

INGREDIENTS:

1 1/2 tsp (7 ml) olive oil
2 garlic cloves, finely chopped
2 celery stalks, finely chopped
8 oz (250 g) lean ground beef
8 oz (250 g) lean ground pork
1/2 cup (125 ml) fresh bread crumbs
1 egg white
1/4 tsp (1 ml) dried oregano
1/4 tsp (1 ml) dried basil
1 can crushed tomatoes
2 onions, finely chopped
2 tbsp (25 ml) tomato paste
2 tbsp (25 ml) chopped parsley
1/8 tsp (0.5 ml) black pepper

METHOD:

1. Preheat oven to 350°F (180°C). In small frying pan , heat oil over moderate heat. Add garlic and celery and sauté until softened and lightly browned, 5 minutes. Remove from heat and let cool slightly.
2. In bowl, combine ground beef, ground pork, bread crumbs, egg white, oregano and basil. Stir in celery mixture until just combined.
3. Using your hands, shape mixture into 16 meatballs about 1 1/2 in (3.5 cm) across.
4. Spray rack with vegetable oil cooking spray. Place meatballs on rack over baking tray, and bake until well browned on all sides, 10 to 15 minutes, turning occasionally. Transfer to plate and reserve. Meanwhile, in large nonstick frying pan over moderate heat, combine tomatoes, onions and tomato paste and bring to boil. Cover and simmer mixture until slightly thickened, about 12 minutes.
5. Return meatballs to frying pan. Cover and cook until cooked through, 20 minutes. Stir parsley into tomato sauce and season with black pepper.

ARIES ♈
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
Come the early part of next week you will be focused on a new plan or project. Today's disappointments will soon be forgotten.

TAURUS ♉
APRIL 21-MAY 21
Loved ones will be rather negative in their views today and you are advised to ignore their dismal outlook and follow your instincts.

GEMINI ♊
MAY 22-JUNE 21
You appear to have overlooked a number of small but important details and that carelessness is now holding you back.

CANCER ♋
JUNE 22-JULY 22
If you change something that does not appear to be working now you will regret it later in the month when the Sun moves into your favour.

LEO ♌
JULY 23-AUG 23
The fact is you are the kind of larger-than-life character who tends to attract gossip. You should be flattered. At least you've been noticed.

VIRGO ♍
AUG 24-SEPT 22
If a friend or colleague is in difficulties make it your mission to rescue them. Don't wait to be asked for assistance, they may be too proud to ask.

LIBRA ♎
SEPT 23-OCT 23
Why are you worrying about a situation that will, in all probability, work out for the best? Forget it. It's simply not worth the effort.

SCORPIO ♏
OCT 24-NOV 22
You want to believe what someone is telling you but every fibre of your being says they are trying to deceive you.

SAGITTARIUS ♐
NOV 23-DEC 21
According to the planets the only thing you are guilty of is trying to please too many people. Try pleasing yourself for a change.

CAPRICORN ♑
DEC 22-JAN 20
If you feel that a certain course of action is right then press ahead with it, even if everyone else seems to think you've got it wrong. Trust yourself.

AQUARIUS ♒
JAN 21-FEB 18
You see deeper and further than most people but sometimes it works against you in that it makes you reluctant to take risks.

PISCES ♓
FEB 19-MARCH 20
A friend or family member is telling you only part of a story. Make it your business to get the other side of the story from the relevant source.
